Rutgers Classics is piloting a new intensive summer program in Greek, which aims to give students with no prior experience in Greek a significant jump-start into reading real Greek literature. Our eight-week intensive will cover the entire first year of Greek in six weeks and then offer students a taste of reading great works by Plato, Homer, and selections of Euripides Medea in the final weeks of the program. With five contact hours of class each day and access to instructors outside of class time, students will acquire a comprehensive knowledge of Greek morphology and syntax, and will leave our program prepared to enter upper-level courses at their home institutions. All students accepted into the program will receive a scholarship that covers 20% of standard tuition rates.

We also plan to offer housing in a conveniently situated dormitory at a reasonable rate to those who need it.

Texts:
Hansen and Quinn’s Greek: an Intensive Course;
Plato’s Ion; Homer’s Odyssey 12; Selections from Euripides Medea;
Selections of Greek poetry and prose at sight (provided by instructor)

Tuition:
Eight credits for $2,683 (in-state) | $6,190 (out-of-state)
Further scholarships available for students from groups historically underrepresented in Classics

Application:
In order to participate in the course, we ask that you fill out a brief application, which requires you to explain your interest in the course, to list any prior language experience (with Greek or any other language), and to provide the names and email addresses of two references who can recommend you for the program.

Please feel free to reach out to the director of the program, Jeff Ulrich (jeulrich@classics.rutgers.edu), with any questions you may have.
